Excerpt from the Sermon, Bethlehem And Its Good News

By Horatius Bonar, 1867

"The message that comes to us from Bethlehem is a very decided one. It is not a finished one; it was only finished at the cross; but, so far as it goes, it is quite explicit; quite unambiguous. It means love, peace, pardon, eternal life. The lesson taught us at Bethlehem is the lesson of grace; the grace of God, the grace of the Father and of the Son. We may learn much, indeed, as to the way of life, from Bethlehem. It must not, indeed, stand alone; you must associate it with Jerusalem; you must bring the cradle and the cross together. But still it teaches us the first part of the great lesson of peace. It says, though not so fully as Golgotha, that God is love. The beginning is not the end- but still it is the beginning. The dawn is not the noon- but still it is the dawn. Bethlehem is not Jerusalem- but still it is Bethlehem. And the Prince of peace is there. The God of salvation is there. The manifested life is there.
