The Secret Place

The Parable of the Prodigal Son

So, how does this parable speak to us today? I think it's the same message Jesus intended for the Pharisees. Jesus is inviting us to the Father's feast. He is inviting us to share in His mission to seek and save the lost. This parable is not meant to make us feel warm and cuddly. It's calling us to examine our own hearts.

Psalm 103

As we prepare to enter into corporate worship this morning, let us consider Charles Spurgeon's devotion on Psalm 103, which is our Call to Worship...

And all that is within me, bless his holy name.

Many are our faculties, emotions, and capacities—but God has given them all to us, and they ought all to join in chorus to his praise. Half-hearted, ill-conceived, unintelligent praises are not such as we should render to our loving Lord. If the law of justice demanded all our heart and soul and mind for the Creator, much more may the law of gratitude put in a comprehensive claim for the homage of our whole being to the God of grace.
