How Deep the Father's Love

We are told that when Peter denied Christ the third time, and the rooster crowed, "the Lord turned and looked straight at Peter." (Luke 22:61) Those words are deeply touching! Surrounded by blood-thirsty and insulting enemies, in the full anticipation of horrible outrages, an unjust trial, and a agonizing sin-atoning death — the Lord Jesus yet found time to think kindly of His poor erring disciple. Even then He would have Peter know, that He did not forget him. Sorrowfully no doubt, but not angrily, He "turned and looked straight at Peter." There was a deep meaning in that look. It was a sermon which Peter never forgot.

This morning we will sing the song, The Look, which was written by John Newton. On Sunday, April 5, 1778, Mr. Newton preached a sermon, using this song as a part of his sermon. The below is an excerpt that John Newton entered into his diary that evening...

I preached to others, O that thou wouldst impress the word upon my own heart. I set thee forth as the Chief Beloved, who alone deservest our trust, love and service, yet idols dispute thy place. I point out to them the causes of that leanness under which I myself still languish. I speak of the privilege of living with thy Cross in view, yet alas! how often, and how much is it out of my sight. O Lord I am weak and oppressed, do thou undertake for me and set my heart at rest. I desire to be peacefully resigned to every dispensation as proceeding from thee. But alas, is it not my own fault that I live so distant from thee, and so far below my privileges. Public affairs are exceedingly gloomy, and call for continual wrestling prayer. But I seem stupidly unconcerned, and unable to lay these things to heart, as I ought. Lord quicken me.
